CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

“Transitions are challenging but they also bring with them opportunities to change and strive for greater excellence”

The year 2016 has been one of changes and opportunities. The early part of 2016 brought with it the uncertainties of the previous year with a dwindling funding pipe line calling for restructuring to manage this situation taking priority. But the ability of the team to liaise with both existing and new donors to be able to enhance the stability of TISL's program for 3 years up to 2018 has been an important step forward.

A few highlights of the year;

TI has been a part of the Right To Information (RTI) movement in the country and was proud to realize the passing of the RTI act in August, the announcement of the commissioners and the setting up of the commission in December. Having been part of the RTI advisory task force and of the drafting of the act where our recommendations and amendments were valued. TISL also prepared a legislative brief on the act for members of parliament and was part of a program to train the parliamentarians too.

Sri Lanka joining the Open Government Partnership (OGP) was another milestone for transparent governance in the country. TISL as civil society lead was able to work with a group of organisations and link up with local stakeholders to put together the civil society national action plan, which was by and large incorporated into the final government national action plan. TISL then joined the national steering committee which includes nine CSO's and eight ministries to ensure monitoring and implementation respectively of the plan.

There is a recognition that much needs to be done on the RTI becoming a tool for civic mobilization of both people and civil society to advocate and engage government on transparent governance, going beyond it being seen as a box to tick with regards the country's international commitments. There is a need to build a movement at different levels to mobilize civil society to take more ownership and engage government at every level.

Increasing women's representation in the political space admittedly has not been one of TISL's core areas in the past. The European union funded Electoral Integrity program on electoral governance was the platform that inspired TISL's young team to work with other local stakeholders who have been working in this area to add our support and voice to help aspiring women and their organizations in understanding the democratic process, the local government legislation and how to engage and run a media campaign including on social media. Essential aspects to better prepare women when taking the plunge.

The organisation has a young and dynamic Executive Director in Asoka Obeyesekere who brings both a new perspective and a new set of skills. A new strategic plan was developed incorporating 4 important areas of work which is already being rolled out. It has also been a year when the team lost some of its experienced members but has also benefited from a blend of young and experienced dynamic newcomers who along with the longstanding hands continue TISL's initiatives to enhance civil mobilization, support open governance, strengthen inclusive and accountable governance. This we believe will support anti-corruption activities and promote a culture of integrity, accountability, transparent and participatory governance.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR'S MESSAGE

Dear Members,

Having completed my first calendar year at the helm of TISL, I would from the outset like to recognise the continued support and encouragement received from the board, my staff and the membership. I am particularly grateful for those who have given of their time to ensure that I am kept well aware of the institutional memory of the organisation.

2016 has witnessed significant changes both externally and within TISL. Externally we have witnessed the stuttering of the government's delivery on its yahapalanaya (good governance) mandate, and the rapidly changing realities facing civil society sustainability. Internally we have commenced on a new strategic plan for 2016-2020, which sets an exciting trajectory – but has also required bold administrative decisions to reflect the new course chartered for the organisation.

The new strategic plan has seen TISL take significant strides in its leadership in supporting open government, particularly in the Right to Information (RTI) and the Open Government Partnership (OGP). TISL's work on RTI has seen it at the fore in the legislative process, with a foundation being laid for future public engagement on RTI implementation in 2017. Similarly, in being the Open Government Partnership (OGP) Civil Society Secretariat, TISL has been at the centre of driving state-civil society collaboration, which has resulted in a bold OGP National Action Plan. However, this poses plenty of challenges for 2017 on driving government accountability against their OGP commitments.

Furthermore our strategic commitment to continuously drive civic mobilisation in anti-corruption work and strengthening accountable governance has been witnessed through our work on electoral integrity, with focus areas including campaign finance, electoral reform and our extensive work on the promotion of clean politics – the latter through TISL's role within the March 12 movement. TISL has also gained unparalleled access to CIABOC and other key state anti-corruption actors through conducting a TI Secretariat driven Anti-Corruption Agency Assessment.

2016 has also seen significant steps being taken on MP accountability through asset disclosure, with both our input into legislative reform being presented to cabinet and our pioneering asset declaration requests yielding more than half of the entire parliament's asset declarations. At the other end of the governance spectrum TISL has maintained its commitment to grassroots Advocacy and Legal Advice Centres (ALACs) in Colombo, Matara and Vavuniya – with their unique focus on advocacy for those who predominantly face challenges of corruption when seeking state sector service delivery.

The final strategic focus, on inclusive governance - a new area for TISL, has seen preliminary work being conducted in 2016 on women's political representation. This was witnessed through TISL's support for women's group submissions to the Public Representations Committee (PRC) for a new constitution. The groundwork has also been laid for 2017 collaborations with the Asia Foundation and Social Scientists Association (SSA) to develop a tool to assess the vulnerability of citizens to corruption.

The variety of work done in 2016 is testament to the vibrancy of TISL, even during times of significant change. The assembling of a dynamic and committed team, coupled with the new 2020 strategic plan provides significant encouragement for the year ahead.

My team and I look forward to closely collaborating with you all in these endeavours.

Yours sincerely,

S.C. Asoka Obeyesekere

RIGHT TO INFORMATION

The passing of the RTI Act in August 2016 was a significant milestone for Sri Lanka, strengthening the rights of citizens to hold the state and government to account.

RIGHT TO INFORMATION

The passing of the RTI Act in August 2016 was a significant milestone for Sri Lanka, strengthening the rights of citizens to hold the state and government to account.

One of the key areas in which TISL was active in 2016 was in continuing to advocate for the strengthening and passing of the Right to Information (RTI) Bill. TISL's advocacy built on a legislative brief that was produced in late 2015, which outlined six key points deemed necessary to strengthen the draft RTI Bill. As a member of the Media Ministry convened RTI Taskforce, TISL had the opportunity to sit as observers to the final meetings of the RTI drafting committee, where four of TISL's recommended amendments were adopted in the final RTI Act.

Following the passage of the Act, TISL turned its focus to advocating for its effective implementation, specifically focusing on increasing citizens' engagement with RTI. In order to raise awareness of the RTI Act among the public, TISL participated in a number of outreach activities.

Twelve radio programs were broadcast on the state-run radio station Ruhunu Sevaya to emphasize the link between RTI and corruption. In addition to this, four RTI training programs were conducted for CBOs and media personnel in the Southern province.

Five RTI training workshops were held for a total of 108 youth participants in the Northern province, which led to follow-up forums being conducted by trained youth. The discussions fostered a dialogue on post-war issues and how citizens can address them through RTI. On completion of these workshops, the trained youth activists identified the integral role youth have in communities, and decided to conduct RTI People's Forums to increase public engagement with RTI. The activists mobilized the Rural Development Society, the Women's Rural Development Society and other youth groups in their communities to foster dialogue on RTI.

TISL also initiated the creation of RTI hubs and thematic RTI CSO Coalitions that will be operating in several districts across the country by mid-2017. TISL commenced work with Sarvodaya in training their staff to facilitate citizen RTI requests. TISL will expand the scope of our Shelter for Integrity offices to include RTI and Sarvodaya identified key District Offices that likewise will operate as RTI hubs. This will lead to RTI hubs operating in Colombo, Trincomalee, Ratnapura, Matara and Anuradhapura by mid-2017. Initial outreach to fellow CSO partners in the establishment of thematic CSO Coalitions in Colombo, Matara, Ampara, Trincomalee and Jaffna also commenced in late 2016. TISL has also launched a website dedicated to RTI, www.rtiwatch.lk, which is the go-to website for all things RTI-related. These initiatives have generated greater knowledge of RTI among the public and work to encourage further citizen engagement with the RTI Act.

Launching rtiwatch.lk

In anticipation of the RTI Act coming into effect on 3 February 2017, TISL launched a website dedicated to RTI, www.rtiwatch.lk, on 28 September 2016. The launch coincided with International Right to Know Day, which raises awareness about people's right to access government information while promoting freedom of information as essential to both democracy and enhanced standards of governance. The website was launched online in all three national languages and is the go-to website for all things RTI-related. It contains a variety of information on RTI, from providing sample RTI requests and detailing the process of lodging an RTI request, to giving access to successful RTI requests made by TISL and providing a space for the public to ask any RTI-related questions. The website is the first of its kind in Sri Lanka and it is hoped that this initiative will generate greater knowledge and citizen engagement on RTI.

RTIWatch.lk was awarded the Bronze Award for non-profit website in the Best Web Awards held in April 2017

THE OPEN GOVERNMENT PARTNERSHIP (OGP)

The development and submission of a civil society Open Government Partnership (OGP) National Action Plan (NAP) marked a key outcome for the organization in 2016.

The OGP was globally launched in 2011, to provide an international platform for domestic reformers committed to making their governments more open, accountable and responsive to citizens. Through this initiative, government and civil society collaborate together to develop and implement reforms that advance open government.

Sri Lanka became a signatory to the OGP in October 2015, when the government committed to producing a NAP aimed at supporting open government practices. Prior to signing, TISL had publicly advocated for Sri Lanka's OGP membership. Each NAP covers a two-year period and is created through a collaborative process between government and civil society.

TISL took on the role as CSO coordinator for the OGP process in Sri Lanka and in collaboration with partner CSOs, created a CSO OGP Steering Committee comprising thirteen organizations, with each organization taking responsibility for drafting a specific commitment. The final CSO NAP had a total of 12 commitments broken down into 9 thematic areas: Education, Health, Local Government, Corruption, Right to Information (RTI), Women in Political Governance, Women, ICT and Environment. These areas were identified through public consultations conducted in each of the nine provinces in the country. The CSO Steering Committee presented the CSO NAP to the government in June 2016 and in October 2016 the draft received cabinet approval, albeit with minor amendments.

Following the approval of the NAP, TISL initiated a number of activities to enable the public and civil society to hold the government accountable for the NAP implementation. An online monitoring mechanism was developed by TISL to track the progress of the NAP and its implementation, in accordance with the 116 milestones found on the NAP timeline (www.tisrilanka.org/ogp). To increase the public's engagement with the NAP, TISL ran a print media campaign and held press conferences to provide greater publicity on NAP commitments.

As part of this campaign calendars, which identified the 12 NAP commitments, were developed and shared for distribution with TISL's CSOs partners and state officials. This provided a further opportunity to build public familiarity with the OGP and the commitments laid out in the NAP, although continued outreach will be necessary to sustain engagement with OGP going forward.

TISL's role as civil society coordinator for the Open Government Partnership (OGP) process provided a unique opportunity to reach out to fellow CSOs and build partnerships based on a mutual commitment to open government. This is the first coordinated open government policy planning exercise of this nature in Sri Lanka. In ensuring CSO ownership of the NAP, the CSO steering committee is both invested in the commitments identified and in the monitoring of government's progress towards fulfilling these commitments. A key impact of this initiative is the commitment and interest of a range of CSOs, who have both varying thematic expertise and policy/activism backgrounds, joining together to collaboratively work on furthering Transparency, Accountability and Public participation (TAP) in Sri Lankan governance.

TISL is conscious of the lukewarm commitment of the government to its OGP NAP. Therefore a priority going forward is to ensure that civil society has the capacity and drive to monitor the implementation of the NAP and hold the government accountable to its commitments in a manner that ever more resonates with the public.

SHELTER FOR INTEGRITY

A key element of TISL's work in 2016 was aiding citizens in the fight against corruption through the organization's Advocacy and Legal Advice Centres (ALACs), commonly known as the Shelter for Integrity.

SHELTER FOR INTEGRITY

A key element of TISL's work in 2016 was aiding citizens in the fight against corruption through the organization's Advocacy and Legal Advice Centres (ALACs), commonly known as the Shelter for Integrity.

ALACs are a legal aid mechanism used in Transparency International (TI) chapters worldwide, to empower citizens to hold the state accountable for corruption faced in their day-to-day lives. TISL's ALACs are conducted under the name 'Shelter for Integrity', and serve as a bridge between citizens and state institutions, advocating for changes in policy, and providing a platform for citizens to openly discuss experiences of corruption. Through this initiative, citizens at the grassroots are empowered to redress their corruption related grievances through TISL advocacy and support.

Through TISL's Shelter for Integrity, with offices in Colombo, Vavuniya and Matara, the organization continued to provide free legal advice for persons who were affected by, or witnesses of, corruption. Over 1700 citizen complaints were received in 2016 from both walk-in clients and those who attended TISL's legal advice clinics, 62% of which were resolved. The ALACs followed up these complaints by referring them to state institutions, meeting with government officials and taking legal action, depending on the nature of the issue.

Through the Matara office TISL conducted trainings on the legal, procedural and practical aspects of monitoring small-scale construction works for local CBO leaders in Ambalanthota, Weligama, Kamburupitiya and Matara. These trainings were based on a manual written by Senaka Palliyaguruge, the Municipal Commissioner of Matara, and published by TISL. When the decentralised budget allocated to each MP was doubled from LKR 5 million to LKR 10 million in 2015 small-scale construction projects were enabled without going through the tendering procedures that are otherwise required, creating space for corruption. Monitoring of small-scale construction projects by local CBOs is an important preventative measure. A separate training was conducted for media in Matara, with the additional focus of reporting on corruption.

as citizen journalists. The training programs focused on the lack of implementation of the Lessons Learnt and Reconciliation Commission (LLRC) and the subsequent impact on corruption and governance in the region. Importantly, the youth activists received training on the use of social media as a tool to shed light on government and bureaucratic failures that contribute to corrupt practices and poor governance.

These youth activists utilized the knowledge gained from TISL's workshops to conduct surveys among victims and witnesses of corruption in twenty selected Grama Niladhari divisions in the Northern Province. Through these surveys the activists were able to obtain information about people's experiences of corruption and, based on this information, the youth organized legal advice clinics to provide these people with redress. Legal advice clinics were conducted in Jaffna, Kilinochchi, Mullaitivu and Vavuniya, in cooperation with victim groups. These activities continued to build on existing youth networks, which had been mobilized by TISL's past activities in the region.

Youth Engagement through Shelter for Integrity

In 2016, the Shelter for Integrity in Vavuniya focused on enhancing youth participation in the fight against corruption and poor governance, by making them aware of the consequences of corruption and the grievance redress mechanisms available. Five 'Story Development and Social Media Training Programs' were conducted in the Northern Province for 208 youth activists, including young journalists and university students. The participants received training on the needed theoretical and practical knowledge, including interview skills, story writing, photojournalism and social media, to report rights violations and issues of corruption

ASSET DECLARATIONS

In December 2015 TISL in collaboration with CIABOC presented recommendations to strengthen the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Act to President Sirisena at a public event at Independence Square. The recommendations included the repeal of its archaic secrecy provisions clause.

Mr. Asoka Obeysekere
Executive Director
Transparency International Sri Lanka

Dear Mr. Obeysekere,

Request for Assets and Liabilities Declaration

Ref. to your letter dated 13th September 2016 had with my office on 15th November 2016 on

Kindly note that the payment with respect to availability of Declarations of Assets and Liabilities submission/non-submission by the Members of cheque worth "One Hundred Thousand Five Hundred of "The Secretary General of Parliament".

Furthermore, the exact amount that needs to be paid will be communicated to you subsequent to your letter requesting the copies of the Declarations of Assets and Liabilities Parliament.

Please acknowledge the receipt of this letter and the enclosed documents.

The Act entitles the public to request and examine asset declarations from all public officials - from the President and Members of Parliament (MPs) to Judges and provincial councilors - thereby enabling individuals to detect abuses of power, corruption or the misuse of State resources for personal gain. The Act is one of the most empowering tools for accountability as it gives an individual the legal right to request an asset declaration, hence, greatly enhancing scrutiny of elected officials. TISL's work on the Act has focused in particular on the archaic secrecy provisions within the Act, which prevent individuals from publicizing the information obtained, in effect restricting any public discussion on allegations of corruption of public officials. The Act states that individuals who do publicize the information obtained are liable to a fine of LKR 2000 or up to 2 years rigorous imprisonment.

Throughout 2016 TISL continued campaigning for the removal of these provisions and in October 2016, through Sri Lanka's first OGP National Action Plan (NAP), the government committed to remove the secrecy provisions contained in the Act by June 2017.

Moreover, in a breakthrough for transparency and accountability in Sri Lanka, TISL utilized the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Act to request the Asset Declarations of all 225 MPS, and has received more than half as of January 2017. The use of the Act by TISL demonstrated that the procedures outlined under the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Act are in part functioning. TISL is still awaiting the response from the Office of the President for Cabinet Ministers asset declarations. This is the first time that a large-scale asset declaration request of this nature has been made. It has also revealed the potential for accountability through asset declarations.

TISL hopes that asset declarations can be requested and disseminated freely in the future, if not through the removal of the secrecy provisions, then through the utilization of the Right to Information (RTI) Act. Until this commitment is realized, TISL will use data from asset declarations in the organization's anti-corruption efforts, while working within the constraints of the law.

ELECTORAL INTEGRITY

TISL's Electoral Integrity program commenced in mid-2015, with a focus on strengthening the electoral processes and systems in Sri Lanka.

ELECTORAL INTEGRITY

TISL's Electoral Integrity program commenced in mid-2015, with a focus on strengthening the electoral processes and systems in Sri Lanka. The program is being carried out in partnership with the People's Action for Free and Fair Elections (PAFFREL) and the Campaign for Free and Fair Elections (CaFFE), two leading civil society organizations in the field of election monitoring and observation. The program focuses on engaging in the process of constitutional reform, lobbying for a Mixed Member Proportional (MMP) System, initiating a dialogue on campaign finance regulations, advocating for women's quotas to enhance political representation and strengthening the integrity of the electoral process by training local government political candidates on how to engage in clean and responsible politics.

As part of the constitutional reform process, and in line with TISL's goals of enhancing civic mobilization and ensuring inclusive governance, TISL engaged in a number of activities to provide recommendations for the new constitution which reflected the interests of a wide cross-section of marginalized groups, by both gender and ethnicity. In doing so, workshops were held for individuals, CSOs and other stakeholders in the plantation sector, as well as for women's rights activists, women's organizations, female political leaders and representatives from the public sector, to facilitate their contribution to the constitutional reform process. As a result of these workshops, the recommendations made to the Public Representations Committee (PRC) for a new constitution were of an inclusive and diverse nature as they represented the perspectives of those who have been on an unequal footing in participating in the governance of the country.

Electoral System Reform

A key aspect of this program was the lobbying for a Mixed Member Proportional (MMP) system. The MMP is a hybrid two-tier voting system that will ensure greater constituency representation, whilst also ensuring proportionality, which is essential to ensuring both ethnic and ideological diversity in Parliament.

A key element of this activity included the commissioning of a study on the mixed electoral system to analyze the nuances of the MMP system in-depth, as well as to shed light on the common misconceptions associated with adopting this system in Sri Lanka. We commissioned a study on the MMP by Verité Research, an independent multi-disciplinary think-tank. A policy brief titled 'Adopting a Mixed Member Proportional (MMP) System in Sri Lanka' was produced which made policy level recommendations to adopt the MMP system.

TISL disseminated the study as part of our advocacy efforts among political party representatives, MPs and members of the Steering Committee of the Constitutional Assembly. Encouragingly, the Constitutional Assembly Steering Committee had taken into consideration the salient features of the MMP system noted in the policy brief.

TISL will continue to use the policy brief to engage policy makers and other stakeholders working on electoral reforms, to ensure that the principles of MMP are reflected in any new electoral system.

Clean Politics

TISL collaborated with the March 12th Movement (M12M) to promote a clean political culture among the prospective candidates for the upcoming local government elections. M12M consists of civil society organizations collaborating to establish a clean political culture in Sri Lanka. Convened by PAFFREL, TISL is a member of the Steering Committee. In partnership with the M12M, TISL organized a series of training programs for potential local government candidates, with the objective of introducing the concepts, practices and values associated with clean politics. Participants were nominated by Parliamentarians within the M12M clean politics collective, and workshops were conducted jointly for members of rival political parties to give participants an opportunity to get to know each other and work across party affiliations. TISL has received a number of requests from Parliamentarians and organizations to conduct similar programs, which the organization plans to explore in the coming year.

Campaign Finance Regulations

TISL took the lead in initiating a dialogue on campaign finance regulations as part of our work in 2016. TISL is advocating for a ceiling on campaign finance expenditure and the need for political parties and individuals to declare their sources of funding. The need for regulating the campaign finances of political parties was highlighted as an emerging issue by civil society election monitoring groups and the Elections Commission during the 2015 elections. As a result, TISL produced a policy brief on campaign finances, which discusses the current context and explores improvements to campaign finance regulations in Sri Lanka. This brief was developed with the support of the International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES) and was later reviewed by Dr. Magnus Ohman, an international expert on the subject, attached to IFES. Dr. Ohman's feedback was incorporated into the report and the final version has now been sent for translations ahead of publication.

Public Awareness and Outreach for Electoral Integrity

Other actions within our electoral integrity program included press briefings to communicate the need for campaign finance regulations, the need for revisions to strengthen the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Act and issues relating to the upcoming local government elections. In addition, TISL collaborated with Uva Community Radio to provide informative content to listeners about the functions of local government authorities in light of the forthcoming local government elections. Fifteen 30-minute segments were aired on a weekly basis. Furthermore, TISL held mobile clinics in the Northern Province, in Jaffna, Vavuniya and Analaithivu Island, to support individuals in the process of creating their National Identity Cards (NIC). These mobile clinics also disseminated information on the rights and responsibilities of citizens when voting.

STRENGTHENING ANTI-CORRUPTION AGENCIES

TISL continued its collaboration with the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption (CIABOC) in 2016 through a number of initiatives, with the aim to strengthen the enforcement of anti-corruption mechanisms in the country. This work unfolded in three separate areas.

First, TISL in conjunction with the TI Secretariat conducted an assessment of CIABOC to identify the weaknesses and strengths of the Commission. TISL envisages fostering a constructive dialogue with CIABOC in the coming year based on the results of the Anti-Corruption Agency (ACA) assessment.

Second, TISL has continued to work with CIABOC over the past year to strengthen the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Act, specifically to remove the secrecy provisions pertaining to the Act. TISL's recommendations, made in collaboration with CIABOC, were presented to Cabinet for further consideration.

Third, TISL was approached by

CIABOC to contribute towards Sri Lanka's self-assessment for the United Nations Convention against Corruption (UNCAC). CIABOC, being the government's lead agency in the UNCAC review process, invited TISL to provide input and comments on the draft self-assessment. TISL welcomes the opportunity for further engagement on this core anti-corruption area and will look to devote resources to developing greater internal expertise on UNCAC in 2017.

COALITION AGAINST CORRUPTION (CAC) WHISTLEBLOWER ACT

One of TISL's priorities is to enhance civic mobilization in order to eliminate corruption. In light of this commitment, members of the Coalition Against Corruption (CAC) came together to draft recommendations for a Whistleblower Protection Policy.

The CAC is a coalition consisting of trade unions, civil society organizations, academics, media personnel and the general public that has pledged their commitment to act against all forms of bribery and corruption, in order to create a nation that upholds integrity. One of the aims of the coalition is to lobby for the enactment of legislation on whistleblower protection. In July 2016, the CAC launched a policy document, which provided recommendations to encourage and protect whistleblowers. The document notes that one of the obstacles to eradicating corruption in the country is the lack of protection for those who expose corruption, despite the establishment of several anti-corruption bodies and growing public awareness of corruption.

Whistleblowers experience a serious threat to their safety and their livelihood, which discourages them from coming forward and perpetuates the perception that corrupt practices can continue without consequences. The recommendations of the CAC, therefore, targeted the repeal of a clause within Sri Lanka's Establishment Code that undermines whistleblowers by allowing them to be dismissed from service for revealing information on corruption to the media. Such a clause prevents whistleblowers from speaking up against corruption and it is essential that the government recognise the importance of protecting the rights of whistleblowers.

TISL is looking to incorporate new funding streams for CAC advocacy in 2017 to take forward whistleblower protection, with the further intention to combine this with renewed work on the Protection of Public Resources, which TISL hopes to focus on beyond the current confines of election cycles. Similarly TISL will look to work closely with CAC to connect it with public interest RTI requests in 2017.
